MAYORAL ELECTION
★★★★ PART 2 ★★★★

WHAT TO KNOW ABOUT CHICAGO'S RUNOFF ELECTION

By Leonor Vivanco | REDEYE

TUESDAY IS ELECTION DAY!

After Tuesday, we'll know whether Mayor Rahm Emanuel or Cook County Commissioner Jesus "Chuy" Garcia will be running the city for the next four years. Also, we can look forward to the end of the campaign TV ads and no more mailers getting stuffed in your mailbox. Now that it's Election Day, here are seven things you should know.

LVIVANCO@REDEYECHICAGO.COM | @LVIVANCO

142,344

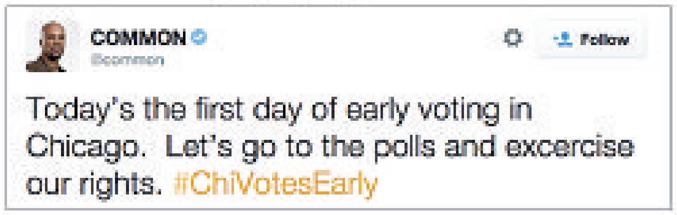
This election already shattered early voting figures for a municipal election. A total of 142,344 early voters cast their ballots ahead of Election Day, including the candidates themselves. It's just one indicator that the voter turnout overall could be better than in February.

YOU CAN VOTE FROM 6 A.M. TO 7 P.M.

at your assigned polling place. There are more than 2,000 polling places, including some rather unusual spots, to cast a ballot and grab a happy hour beer such as Happy Village, buy groceries at Treasure Island Foods, do some laundry at the laundromat or bowl a couple of games at a bowling alley.

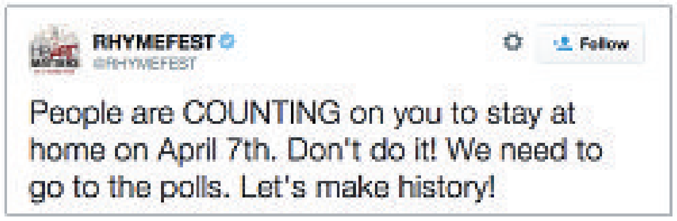
CHICAGO CELEBRITIES CARE ABOUT THIS ELECTION, TOO.

See, stars they really are just like us. Chicagoans Common and Rhymefest have tweeted about the election and encouraged people to get out and vote.



COMMON @common

Today's the first day of early voting in Chicago. Let's go to the polls and excercise our rights. #ChiVotesEarly



RHYMEFEST @RHYMEFEST

People are COUNTING on you to stay at home on April 7th. Don't do it! We need to go to the polls. Let's make history!

THIS IS CHICAGO'S FIRST-EVER RUNOFF.

The first year Chicago went to a nonpartisan runoff system for citywide offices such as mayor was in the 1999 election. Previously, the city held a primary election to send the top mayoral candidate from each political party into the general election, much like a presidential election. Now the top vote getter is the winner and the candidate can only win outright if they get more than 50 percent of the vote. That did not happen in February among a field of five candidates.

Running the city as its CEO may not be the only job up for grabs on the ballot. In addition to voting for mayor, voters in 18 wards will be asked to pick an alderman who will serve on the City Council.

IT'LL BE WARMER THAN IN FEBRUARY

so the excuse that it's too cold to go vote doesn't fly. However, there is a 50 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms, so bring an umbrella. The day of the Feb. 24 election, there were some flurries (0.1 inches), and the high was 29 degrees and the low was 4 degrees. UIC political science professor Dick Simpson has said that snow and cold tend to depress voter turnout but voters will go out in bad weather to vote if the election is very competitive. Weather is only a factor if it's extreme, Chicago Board of Election Commissioners spokesman Jim Allen said.

20,000

This is your second chance at electing a mayor. The city saw about 20,000 more people—or a 1.4 percent increase—register to vote between the Feb. 24 election and now. Turnout for the February election was only 34 percent.

We want to hear from you. What should be the first order of business for whoever wins the mayor's race? Should there be a greater focus on fighting crime? Fixing the schools? Adding or getting rid of speed cameras? Head over to our Facebook page or Tweet us at @redeyechicago.

Man charged after shove leads to life-threatening complications

By Megan Crepeau | REDEYE

A Chicago woman is fighting for her life after complications from surgery to fix her broken leg—an injury she suffered after her on-again off-again boyfriend pushed her to the ground in February, authorities said.

Jesus Hernandez, 39, of the 600 block of North Monticello Avenue, was arrested Sunday and is charged with domestic battery in the case.

According to Cook County prosecutors, Hernandez and the woman have dated on and off for years. On Feb. 15, he approached her in the Humboldt Park neighborhood and demanded some money from her tax refund. She gave him some money in an attempt to get him to go away, prosecutors said, and then he pushed her to the ground, which broke her leg in multiple places.

Prosecutors said Hernandez discouraged her from going to the hospital at first, because he was scared she would tell police or hospital officials that he caused the injuries. The victim has needed surgery and, due to complications, is at risk of losing her life, prosecutors said.

A warrant was issued for Hernandez's arrest after the incident but he wasn't located until Sunday, when police officers saw him in an area known for drug trafficking, according to an arrest report. After interviewing him, the officers ran his name through a police department database, found the warrant and arrested him.

EXPRESS LINES

- Cook County prosecutors dropped charges Monday against Maxime Fohounhedo, a former Uber X driver accused of sexually assaulting a female passenger, telling a judge they were acting after new evidence came to light.
- Andrew Mogni, a 20-year-old University of Iowa student from suburban Glen Ellyn who suffered serious injuries during a fall while studying in Rome, died Sunday at Northwestern Memorial Hospital, according to the Cook County medical examiner's office. TRIBUNE

5 riders you'll meet during baseball season

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

» tswartz@redeyechicago.com
» @tracyswartz

They're baaaaack! With baseball season in full swing, expect an influx of Cubs and White Sox fans on Red Line trains and at stations near the ballparks.

The Addison Red Line station next to Wrigley Field last year saw 33 percent more entries through the turnstiles on an average weekday in April (9,000 entries) versus a typical weekday in March (6,800 entries), according to 2014 CTA data.

On the South Side, near U.S. Cellular Field, the Sox/35th Red Line station logged about 500 more entries—a 12 percent increase—on an average April weekday versus a typical March weekday.

Though the CTA typically adds more service to handle the extra baseball traffic, riders may find themselves crammed into Red Line trains with some annoying fans. To help ease these encounters, RedEye presents the five riders you'll meet on the Red Line before and after Cubs and Sox games and how to play ball with them.

1 THE YELLER

She says: WE ARE ON OUR WAY TO THE GAME AND I CAN'T WAIT TO HIGH-FIVE ALL MY FRIENDS AND CAN YOU BELIEVE THAT GUY IS PITCHING AND LET'S DO SOME SHOTS.

RedEye's advice: Don't be that girl. Respect that all riders want to hear on the train are the announcements of the stops. Plus, if a rider gets too rowdy, another rider can use the call button on the train to alert the operator, who can determine if the rowdy rider should be kicked off the train.

2 THE TOURIST

He says: This is my first time to Chicago, and I hear U.S. Cellular Field is great! How do I get there? Where do I stand? How about right in front of the turnstiles?

RedEye's advice: Help out when you can. Confused riders who stand in front of the turnstiles unsure of where to tap their new Ventra cards generally slow the flow of traffic to trains. Be a good CTA rider and help tourists with directions or show them the location of the CTA customer assistance booth in the station.

3 THE SUBURBANITE

She says: I want to take up as much space as possible on the train.

RedEye's advice: It may be easier to find a parking space near Wrigley than space on a Red Line train on gameday. Watch where you sit. Priority seating is intended for senior citizens and riders with disabilities.

4 THE COMMUTER

He says: Not much. Just rolls eyes at the surrounding chaos while muttering that he's just trying to get home and these jerks are everywhere.

RedEye's advice: Take deep breaths. Be patient. Consider taking buses on game days.

5 THE DRUNK

He says: Let me grab a beer for the ride.

RedEye's advice: Even though it may be packed like your favorite dive bar, CTA cars are definitely not bar cars. It's illegal to take a swig on the train. If caught, riders with alcohol face a fine of at least $100.

REALITY'S A JOKE

FROM 'THE SOUP' TO 'COMMUNITY' TO THE STAGE, JOEL McHALE KNOWS FUNNY

By Matt Pais | REDEYE

JOEL McHALE
8 p.m. Fri. at the Venue at Horseshoe Casino, Hammond, Ind. $54-$74.

Though he'd love the job, Joel McHale doesn't think he's popular enough to host the Oscars. I hope one day the Academy proves him wrong.

The Seattle-raised actor-comedian, who appears Friday at the Venue at Horseshoe Casino in Hammond, Ind. (a short drive from Chicago, if you didn't know), has landed high-profile gigs hosting the White House Correspondents' Dinner and the Independent Spirit Awards, not to mention setting the bar for saying clever things about stupid shows as longtime host of E!'s "The Soup."

He's also found just the right balance of swagger and heart on "Community," which recently started its sixth season on Yahoo Screen, and hasn't been given the chance he deserves to star on the big screen, with supporting roles in "Ted," "What's Your Number?" and the upcoming "Adult Beginners," starring Nick Kroll and Rose Byrne.

McHale, 43, is as smart and hilarious as expected during a morning phone interview from L.A., where he says he was a little tired the night before after driving six and a half hours. Why did he have to drive so far? "Uh, I was on the run from the cops."

You have such a quick wit in interviews and all your appearances. Is your mind always working and looking for humor, even when you're not performing?
I guess so. I haven't thought about that. I have a lot of comedian friends that make fun of me. Or my wife will be like, "Turn it off!" I think the way I learned how to just talk in life was a defense and out of insecurity about not being able to read. 'Cause I was—I still am—dyslexic, so I was constantly making jokes and it got me in trouble a lot of the time. But now I can laugh at them. {Laughs wildly.} I just did. That was for a lifetime of sorrow.

Why does your wife say, "Turn it off"?
Just because I'm constantly talking and making stuff up. My kids will be like, I'll tell them jokes, and my older kid used to go, "Ehhhh ... OK, Daddy, no jokes for a week." Like if he didn't like the joke, he would just go, "No jokes for a week." "No jokes for a year." And if he liked the joke, he still goes, "Oh, Daddy, that's funny." And that was a rarity. And I just make more jokes.

I'm sure you're incredibly busy between "Community" and "The Soup." How challenging is it to still have the everyday experiences that generate new material?
Oh, it's constant. I also have two children, so they are a constant fountain of material. Anything that happens in your life you can hopefully [convert] for me to write standup about it. I don't think it stops just because you're working a lot. And with "The Soup," we're constantly plugged into whatever the latest pop culture story is. We see "The Soup" as one big late-night monologue. No, the material is endless, and especially with new television shows that are coming on, there's no shortage.

And onstage it allows you not just a quick line but maybe five whole minutes on "Sex Box."
Yeah, you can talk about "Sex Box" as much as you want. It's great. Especially with standup I can say whatever I want even without any censor. E! has been insanely good at letting us say what we want. Which is the only reason why the show is still as [successful] as it is, is because we make fun of ourselves. For example, Giuliana Rancic getting into hot water with the comments she made a couple weeks ago. E! very well could have said, "We're not. You can't. She's one of our own, you can't comment about it." They were like, "Go ahead. Let us know what you're going to do, but go ahead." They've been very good about it. We get to say whatever we want. But on stage, yes, I get to go further, which is great.

A while back Tyra Banks threatened legal action because of "The Soup." Have you ever been confronted by someone you mocked on the show? Is there an untold story there?
No one to date. With Tyra, she couldn't do anything legally, but King World, the company that distributed her talk show, threatened to pull all her clips off of E! I don't know if that was coming directly from her or directly from some executive or the president, but nobody has said, "How dare you!" That's never happened yet. With reality stars, without exception, they've all come up and said, "Thank you. Please put me on the show again." I'm happy to do it. We try to let people hang themselves. So we hopefully don't just go after people because they're there. They have to look like jerks before we look like a jerk.

What would be going through your head if you ran into Tyra on the street?
Oh, I ran into her at a party. And I have to say, holy crap, she's beautiful in person. I know that people kind of take that for granted. But she is truly remarkable-looking. She was really nice. I don't know if that was like a thing, but she didn't put on any sort of crazy—she didn't do anything provocative or yell at me or anything. [Laughs.] She was just like, "Nice to meet you." I'm like, "Nice to meet you. I can't believe we're meeting each other. This is happening. Should we have a duel?" But she's one of these people that now is so rich, I'm like a gnat or a fruit fly to her, so she was strangely nice. I don't know her other than that. But she didn't try to kill me, so I'm happy about that.

I have to ask what you think about this discussion about Trevor Noah and the concept of comedy.
To hold a comedian to one joke, unless it's insanely offensive or racist, then, come on, if you're going to do that. ... Think about the things that Richard Pryor said on stage or Eddie Murphy has said onstage. That's crazy. Trevor Noah could not be a better choice. If you watch his HBO standup special, it's brilliant. It's such a good choice. When I heard it was going to be him, I was like, "It's so smart." I think his perspective is terrific. If you held me to a couple jokes on Twitter, my career, I would be finished 10 years ago. I think he's a great choice.

SOUPED UP

A "Soup"-style game with fake entertainment news headlines
(Note: In bold are RedEye-concocted fake news, followed by McHale's responses.) M.P.

Joel McHale has been spotted around town on a daily basis with Khloe Kardashian.
With Khloe Kardashian. Daily. He is now her man-servant.

Joel McHale has won a contest to spend six months on the set of "The Real Housewives of New York."
Yes. And the key word there is "won." Because finally I get to. Because that's not a prison sentence at all. No, I'd rather swallow a bullet.

Joel McHale has been sentenced to two weeks alone in the "Sex Box."
In the "Sex Box"? Then I shall break my previous masturbation record.

You have files on this?
Well, I've already set the world's record for it.

I'd have to check Guinness to remind myself what that is.
The masturbation record? Just look it up. It's everywhere. Everyone's talking about it.

If people just Google, "Joel McHale masturbation," will they be happy with the results?
They'll see the masturbation plaza that they built [to commemorate the record].

It's interesting to think about with the Internet and everything being public forever the notion that people can look back on the old things that comedians did and what percentage of them would have things that 10 years later they might wish they'd done differently, but it's already out there.
Yeah, it's just like anything in life. It just seems like a whole hubbub about nothing. It's a non-issue. If you're going to hold him to a couple of jokes, then everybody's in trouble. The Internet can be the most salacious, but then it can be the most teetotaling place in the world too. He could not be a better choice. And no one will be talking about this a month after he starts. It's just crazy to me. I've gotten a couple of jokes that are like, "Hey, that went too far." I'm like, "OK, well, sorry about that. I guess we won't do that. I guess we might consider it next time, but probably not."

NCAA TOURNAMENT COULD USE A FEW TWEAKS FOR MAXIMUM AWESOMENESS

GET MADDER

By Chris Sosa | REDEYE

If you've watched any college basketball for, oh, the past six weeks at least, you've noticed the motivational T-shirts teams have worn. For example, Duke players donned the "[Insert team here] never stops" version during warmups and on the bench.

Wisconsin, the Blue Devils' opponent in Monday's NCAA tournament title game, sported "Make 'Em Believe." There's no better stage than March Madness to do so, given the gauntlet champions have to run to hoist the trophy.

In the end, Duke held off the Badgers 68-63 in a scintillating game that saw numerous ties and lead changes throughout. Tyus Jones poured in 23 points for the Blue Devils, who won the fifth championship in school history.

As fantastic as that was, there'd be a few changes to the tournament if RedEye had its way.

Make 'Em ... Release a bald eagle before every major sporting event.
Because that's just badass. Just remember to clear all small mammals from the area first. And any rodent-like mascots, just to be safe.

Make 'Em ... Work on their outside shots.
The big men in particular. Watching a center like the Badgers' Frank Kaminsky, a Lisle native, light it up from distance makes you appreciate the Dirk Nowitzkis of the world.

Make 'Em ... Design better uniforms.
Looking at you, Adidas. We know your intention is to stand out from the crowd, but there has to be a better way than shorts that resemble peekaboo tighty whiteys.

Make 'Em ... Study Jahlil Okafor.
Not to be outdone, the Blue Devils' star center—ahem, who's from Chicago—has about 1,000 finishing moves near the basket. That kind of touch is rare for a player so young, though it doesn't have to be.

Make 'Em ... Use the sideline camera more.
You'd see that angle when one team would bring the ball up the floor, but that's about it. There has to be something more.

Make 'Em ... Create a Stenographer Cam.
Mostly because it'd be fun to see if they rolled their eyes every time CBS analyst Bill Raftery made up a word.

Make 'Em ... Mic the coaches.
Let's face it, sideline interviews are useless. But what coaches say in-game could be wildly entertaining—even if they have to show it on HBO.

Make 'Em ... Get a haircut.
Not sure what Wisconsin's Bronson Koenig was thinking with that 'do. Even if racing lines have come back into style, they shouldn't have.

2 What does it mean when a rabbit runs onto Wrigley Field?	The rats from under the bleachers are finally gone, because you know they would have eaten the hell out of that rabbit.	Someone was "hoppy" about the new scoreboard. It's a rabbit joke.	It means the guys are gonna have to pee in a cup to use the bathroom. "What if you just snapped the ball right to Forte? Think about it."	"Don't worry, Jay Cutler is TOTALLY as good as Peyton Manning!"	"Do whatever Marc Trestman didn't say and everything the Fox says."	Whatever it is, Fox will have a sly response to throw back at them.

Wrigley relief in sight?

Portable toilets will be installed at Wrigley Field for the next two months after some fans waited in line more than an hour to use restrooms during the team's home opener Sunday.

The problem started when two of the four restrooms on the upper deck, a men's and a women's, were shut down by flooding because of a "problem with our plumbing," Cubs spokesman Julian Green said.

That sent many fans to the lower level, where there were two regular restrooms and two "smaller, temporary" restrooms in the left-field concourse and three restrooms in the right-field concourse, Green said.

"We could've provided additional portable units and we didn't," he said.

But they will be provided Tuesday and will continue to be used until work is done on the lower level and more restrooms are available by late May, Green said.

THE MOUTHWATCH

"LET'S MAKE IT CLEAR—THE FANS DON'T OWE ME ANYTHING. I'VE SAID ALL ALONG DURING SPRING TRAINING, THE PART OF FEELING LIKE A ROOKIE IS I HAVE TO EARN THEIR CHEERS AND THEIR RESPECT."

—Yankees designated hitter Alex Rodriguez, who was mostly cheered in his return to action after missing all of the 2014 season; he was suspended for using performance-enhancing drugs.

TODAY IN THE YEAR ...

1966: The United States recovered a hydrogen bomb it had lost off the coast of Spain.
1987: Harold Washington won a second mayoral term handily, making him the first Chicago mayor since the late Richard J. Daley to win re-election.
2008: The Chicago Tribune won a Pulitzer prize for articles that examined some Chinese-made toys that have proven dangerous to children, and the lax federal oversight that failed to address the issue in a timely way.

THE SPY WHO SPRAINED ME

An on-set injury apparently left Daniel Craig only shaken, not stirred, thr.com reports. James Bond reportedly had surgery on his knee over Easter weekend after the 47-year-old hurt it filming a fight scene for "Spectre," the upcoming installment in the 007 series. "During a scheduled break, Daniel Craig had arthroscopic surgery to repair his knee injury. He will rejoin production on April 22nd at [London's] Pinewood [Studios]," a spokesperson said. Guess all that jumping from planes and running across speeding trains catches up to ya.

THE QUOTE

"I think the best person for the job should get jobs. I'm all for women having to work harder to prove themselves at this juncture, if that's the way it is in the world. But if you work a job, and a man is working the same job, you should be getting paid the same." —Comedian Sarah Silverman to People magazine promoting Levo's Ask4More campaign ahead of National Equal Pay Day on April 14.

Amal (left) and George Clooney EPA FILE

That's the fine you'll have to fork over to Italian authorities if you have the audacity to approach George or Amal Clooney in the Lake Como town of Laglio, where the couple has a villa, according to Gawker. The new restrictions, decreed by the town's mayor, come as Clooney prepares to celebrate his 53rd birthday with what we assume will be a lavish affair that will draw plenty of paparazzi and other annoying peasants. OK, but roughly how much would it cost to just take a little whiff of George? Like $350? We're asking for a friend ...

Grandpa Dubya, again

George W. Bush may have to cut back on all those watercolor paintings he's been doing in his post-presidential retirement. Looks like 43 will have another grandbaby to take up his time instead. According to People, former first daughter Jenna Bush Hager and her husband Henry Hager will welcome a second daughter later this summer. The new arrival will join big sister Mila, who turns 2 next week.

That's so money

Nelly was right: Regular old grillz are for chumps. Just ask Floyd Mayweather. The boxer drops roughly $25,000-a-pop for custom mouthpieces, made by an NY-based dentist, flecked with diamonds and gold flakes or with $100 bills sealed inside, TMZ reports. No wonder he's got so much to smile about.

HOT DATE

April 24

That's when Kardashian kids' stepdad and former Olympian Bruce Jenner's two-hour interview with Diane Sawyer, presumably about his transitioning into life as a woman, will air, ABC News confirmed Monday.
